NEW QUESTION: 3You are designing a localized ASP.NET MVC online shopping application that will be deployed to customers in the United States, China, France, and Brazil. The application must support multiple cultures so that content in the appropriate language is available in each area. You need to ensure that the content can be viewed in several languages. How should you implement this feature? A. Use `System.Collections.Generic.Dictionary` to store alternative translations. B. Include language-specific content in the assembly manifest and use .NET culture libraries. C. Use a resource (.resx) file to provide translations. D. Ensure that all strings are marked internal to avoid conflict with internal literals. Answer: C
Explanation/Reference: Explanation: A resource file is an XML file that contains the strings that you want to translate into different languages or paths to images. The resource file contains key/value pairs. Each pair is an individual resource. Key names are not case sensitive. For example, a resource file might contain a resource with the key `Button1` and the value `Submit`. You create a separate resource file for each language (for example, English and French) or for a language and culture (for example `English [U.K.]`, `English [U.S.]`). Each localized resource file has the same key/value pairs; the only difference is that a localized resource file can contain fewer resources than the default resource file. The built-in language fallback process then handles loading the neutral or default resource. Reference: SP.NET Web Page Resources Overview
