NEW QUESTION: 2 John works as a Database Administrator for DataOneWorld Inc. The company has a SQL Server database. John wants to insert records in a table where the database is structured in a fixed format. Which of the following data models will he use to accomplish the task?
A. Object relational data model
B. Network data model
C. Entity-Relationship Model
D. Relational model
Answer: D
Explanation: A relational model uses a collection of tables to represent both data and the relationship between those data. Every table has multiple columns, and each column has a unique name. A relational model is an example of a record-based model. Record-based models are so named because the database is structured in a fixed format. Each table in the database contains records of a particular type and each record type defines a fixed number of fields or attributes. This model is the most widely used data model, and most database systems are based on this model. This model is at a lower level of abstraction than the E-R Model.
Answer B is incorrect. The Entity-Relationship Model is a collection of objects called entities and the relationships between these objects. Entities in a database are known as attributes. A relationship is an association among several entities. It is a conceptual representation of structured data. Entity-relationship modeling is a relational schema database modeling method that is used in software engineering to produce a type of conceptual data model of a system, often a relational database. The logical structure of a database can be expressed graphically by an E-R diagram, which has the following components:
Rectangle: It represents entity sets.
Ellipse: It represents attributes.
Diamond: It represents relationships among entity sets.
Line: It links attributes to entity sets.
Answer A is incorrect. An object relational data model (ORD) is similar to a relational data model, but with an object-oriented database model. Objects, classes, and inheritance are directly supported in database schemas and in the query language. Answer C is incorrect. The network data model contains logical information such as connectivity relationships among nodes and links, directions of links, and costs of nodes and links. A node represents an object of interest and a link represents a relationship between two nodes.

NEW QUESTION: 3 Which is the proper syntax for referencing a variable's value in an Ansible task? A. @variable_name B. "{{ variable_name }}" C. { variable_name } D. ${variable_name}

Answer: B Explanation: We use the variable's name to reference the variable which we encapsulate in curly brackets `{{ }}`; however, the YAML syntax dictates that a string beginning with a curly bracket denotes a dictionary value. To get around this it's proper to wrap the variable declaration in quotes. Reference:

NEW QUESTION: 4 A. 802.11p B. 802.11g C. 802.11b D. 802.11n Answer: D
