NEW QUESTION: 1 A company is considering an investment of $80,000 at the present time. There is a 55% probability that the investment will perform well and a 45% probability that it will perform poorly. If the investment performs well, the payoff will be $200,000 one year from now. If it performs poorly, the project will be retired at no cost one year from now. Assuming a 10% discount rate, should the company make that investment?A. Yes, since $100,000 > $80,000 B. No, since $80,000 < $100,000C. Yes, since the project may be retired at no cost.D. Yes, since $200,000 > $80,000Answer: A*Explanation: There is 55% chance that the project will succeed and if it succeeds, the payoff will be $200,000. So the expected value of success is $0.55 * 200,000 = 110,000$. The Present Value of this at time 0 (NOW) at a discount rate of 10% is $110,000 / (1.1)^1 = 100,000$ this is ROI (return of Investment). If there is a loss, at time 0 (NOW), all we lose is $80,000 this is investment. Since $100,000 > $80,000 (choice B), the investment should be made.
