NEW QUESTION: 3This backup method must be made regardless of whether Differential or Incremental methods are used.A. Tape backup methodB. Differential backup methodC. Full Backup MethodD. Incremental backup methodAnswer: C*Explanation:Since the "Full" backup method provides a baseline for our systems for Restore, the full backup must be done at least once regardless of the method you are using. Its very common to use full backups in combination with incremental or differential ones to decrease the backup time (however you increment the restore time), but there is no way to maintain a system only with incremental or differential backups. You always need to begin from your restore baseline, the Full Backup.
