NEW QUESTION: 1A service provider requests more details about the recent Inter-AS MPLS VPN Option B configuration that was recently deployed. Consider this configuration:
router bgp 3717
address-family vpnv4 unicast retain route-target all commit!
Which option describes why this particular command is needed?
A. The Inter-AS Option B design implements VPNv4 communication over the Inter-AS link, hence the requirement for a route-target association for each customer VPN connected across two or more ASs.
B. The ASBR can have many working customer VRFs, so this configuration ensures the coexistence of all the route-target extended communities that belong to the all ASBR-terminated customer VRFs.
C. When implementing the Inter-AS Option B MPLS VPN solution, all the route targets that are transmitted over the Inter-AS links need an ASBR local database to forward the customer traffic correctly.
D. In the Inter-AS Option B design, no local VRF is maintained on the ASBR routers, so the default behavior of the operating system is to deny any route-target extended community that is encoded in the incoming iBGP updates. This configuration permits VPNv4 communication by accepting the iBGP updates even if no route targets are configured locally.
