NEW QUESTION: 1In managing strategic change, the portfolio manager performs stakeholder analysis in order to consider the changing requirements. One of the key stakeholders expressed concerns about the lack of recognition of the value contribution of his department. The portfolio manager is not convinced with the level of value contribution. Which of the following is considered the best approach to take?A. This is a key stakeholder and his expectations and requirements should be taken into consideration for further analysisB. Reject the statementC. Assign an owner to follow up on this concern and take a decision accordinglyD. Accept the statement as it is a key stakeholder and the portfolio manager should remain in good contact with himAnswer: A*Explanation:ExplanationIn this case, rejection or approval are not within the authority of a portfolio manager in this case (a recommendation needs to be made); assigning an owner who will take a decision is not correct as well. Further analysis will be needed in order to be able to recommend a decision to the governance board. As a portfolio manager, you will need to analyze the requirement before taking or recommending any decision
