NEW QUESTION: 1You are the administrator of your company network. You use SQL Server 2008 to develop a Business Intelligence (BI) solution. You intend to configure a SQL Server 2008 Analysis Services (SSAS) cube which reads from a remote data source and increases several measure groups by 1 million rows everyday. The cube includes 110 million Fact rows and 600 dimension attributes. You intend to increase the number of users by 200 percent for the cube. During cube processing, you must capture the baseline performance on the overall system. So what should you do?A. You should configure the data collector to collect Query Activity statistics during cube processing.B. You should configure the data collector to collect Performance Counters statistics during cube processing.C. You should monitor cube processing events by using the sp_trace_setfilter system stored procedure.D. You should monitor cube processing events by using the sp_monitor system stored procedure.Answer: A

NEW QUESTION: 2The alternate processing strategy in a business continuity plan can provide for required backup computing capacity through a hot site, a cold site, orA. A crate and ship replacement.B. An online backup program.C. A dial-up services program.D. An off-site storage replacement.Answer: B*Explanation:What I believe is being wanted here is not the other data center backup alternatives but transaction redundancy implementation. The CISSP candidate should understand the three concepts used to create a level of fault tolerance and redundancy in transaction processing. While these processes are not used solely for disaster recovery, they are often elements of a larger disaster recovery plan. If one or more of these processes are employed, the ability of a company to get back online is greatly enhanced. Ronald Krutz The CISSP PREP Guide (gold edition) pg 394 (they are Electronic Vaulting, Remote journaling, and Database shadowing)
