NEW QUESTION: 3 Susannah, who is the head of the human resources department, will be responsible for a training session and must decide on the seating style in the space that she will be using. The training will include a large group and will involve a range of activities, including several lectures, film presentations, and a small amount of group work. Which of the following seating styles will be most appropriate for the training that Susannah will be conducting?
A. Conference style
B. Banquet style
C. Theater style
D. Chevron style
E. U-shaped style
Answer: D
Explanation: Explanation: As the question states, the training will encompass several features - lectures, film presentations, and group work. Among the available styles of seating, the chevron style - with the chairs angled in a V shape toward the stage or front of the meeting space - will offer the most versatility for trainees. Answer choice A is incorrect because the theater style seating would be useful for lectures and film presentations but would offer no good way for trainees to break into groups. Answer choice C is incorrect because the banquet style seating would be excellent for group work but would be impractical for lectures and film presentations. Similarly, answer choice D is incorrect because the conference style seating would place participants around one large table, which would not necessarily be useful for any of the three activities that will occur in the training. And answer choice E is incorrect because the U-shaped seating would be useful only for lectures but would not benefit the trainees in a film presentation or in group work.
