NEW QUESTION: 4 Oracle Grid Infrastructure for a stand-alone server is installed on your production host before installing the Oracle Database server. The database and listener are configured by using Oracle Restart. Examine the following command and its output:
$ crsctl config has CRS-4622: Oracle High Availability Services auto start is enabled. What does this imply?
A. When you create a database service by modifying the SERVICE_NAMES initialization parameter, it is automatically added to the Oracle Restart configuration. B. When a database instance is started by using the SRVCTL utility and listener startup fails, the instance is still started. C. When a database is created by using SQL*Plus, it is automatically added to the Oracle Restart configuration. D. When you start an instance on a high with SQL*Plus dependent listeners and ASM disk groups are automatically started. Answer: D
Explanation: Previously (10g and earlier), in the case of Oracle RAC, the CRS took care of the detection and restarts. If you didn't use RAC, then this was not an option for you. However, in this version of Oracle, you do have that ability even if you do not use RAC. The functionality - known as Oracle Restart - is available in Grid Infrastructure. An agent checks the availability of important components such as database, listener, ASM, etc. and brings them up automatically if they are down. The functionality is available out of the box and does not need additional programming beyond basic configuration. The component that checks the availability and restarts the failed components is called HAS (High Availability Service). Here is how you check the availability of HAS itself (from the Grid Infrastructure home):
$ crsctl check has CRS-4638: Oracle High

Availability Services is onlineNote:*crsctl config has Use the crsctl check has command to display the automatic startup configuration of the Oracle High Availability Services stack on the server.*The crsctl config has command returns output similar to the following:CRS-4622: Oracle High Availability Services autostart is enabled.
