NEW QUESTION: 2BackgroundAn Account Team you support has been working with an IT outsourcing company for 9 months. The customer has been considering buying videoconferencing and upgrading to an Avaya Aura@6.2 environment. Their hesitation was in cost justifying the upgrade to 6.2 without a great video solution for mobile users and visual collaboration with external vendors and contractors. They have a main office in Montreal Canada and a remote office in Pune, India. Since the wrong IT decision can be very costly, the customer's expectation is that they would have the ability to archive conferences and justify actions based on the recording.Current infrastructureThe customer has a Communication Server 1000 (CS 1000) R4 solution in their Montreal office, and a BCM 450 in the Pune office. Although there are only about 200 users with premium licenses in the main office and 150 with premium licenses in the remote office, they support about 400 contractors in virtual offices. Although many of their external vendors will want to use remote or mobile solutions, some have existing videoconference rooms.
