NEW QUESTION: 1You are a solutions architect for a global health care company which has numerous data centers around the globe. Due to the ever growing data that your company is storing, you were instructed to set up a durable, cost effective solution to archive your data from your existing on-premises tape based backup Infrastructure to Oracle Cloud Infrastructure (OCI). What is the most-effective mechanism to implement this requirement?A. Setup an on-premises OCI Storage Gateway which will back up your data to OCI Object Storage Standard B. Setup an on-premises OCI Storage Gateway which will back up your data to OCI Object Storage Archive tier. (Correct) C. Setup an on-premises OCI Storage Gateway which will back up your data to OCI Object Storage Standard tier. Use Object Storage life cycle policy management to move any data older than 30 days from Standard to Archive tier. D. Setup fastConnect to connect your on-premises network to your OCI VCN and use rsync tool to copy your data to OCI Object Storage Archive tier. E. Use the File Storage Service in OCI and copy the data from your existing tape based backup to the shared file system Answer: B Explanation: Oracle Cloud Infrastructure offers two distinct storage tiers for you to store your unstructured data. Use the Object Storage Standard tier for data to which you need fast, immediate, and frequent access. Use the Archive Storage service's Archive tier for data that you access infrequently, but which must be preserved for long periods of time. Both storage tiers use the same manageable resources (for example, objects and buckets). The difference is that when you upload a file to Archive Storage, the object is immediately archived. Before you can access an archived object, you must first restore the object to the Standard tier. you can use Storage Gateway to move files to Oracle Cloud Infrastructure Archive Storage as a cost effective backup solution. You can move individual files and compressed or uncompressed ZIP or TAR archives. Storing secondary copies of data is an ideal use case for Storage Gateway.
