A. The Black Out & Remove Content tools are used in order to remove content.
B. In place of the removed items, users can have redaction marks that appear as colored boxes, but cannot leave the area blank.
C. A user can specify custom text or redaction codes in order to appear over the redaction marks.
D. It is the process in which visible text and graphics are permanently removed from a document.
Answer: A,C,D
Explanation: Redaction is the process in which visible text and graphics are permanently removed from a document. Users use the Black Out & Remove Content tools (also called redaction tools) for removing content. In place of the removed items, users can have redaction marks that appear as colored boxes, or they can leave the area blank. Users can specify custom text or redaction codes to appear over the redaction marks. Following are the properties of redaction text:
Context Text: It displays text that is typed into the Custom Text option over the redaction mark.
Font: It displays custom text in the selected font.
Font Size: It displays custom text in the selected point size.
Auto-Size To Fit Redaction Region: It resizes custom text to fit within the redacted area.
Font Color: It displays custom text in the selected color, which can be changed by clicking the color swatch.
Repeat Overlay Text: It fills the redacted area with as many instances of the custom text as required, without changing the font size.
Text Alignment: It aligns text to the left, right, or center.
Answer option D is incorrect. In place of the removed items, users can have redaction marks that appear as colored boxes, or they can leave the area blank.
