NEW QUESTION: 1A. DNSB. HTTPC. TFTPD. 802.1xE. MABF. BOOTPAnswer: A,C,F*Explanation: ACLs are the primary method through which policy enforcement is done at access layer switches for wired devices within the campus.ACL-DEFAULT--This ACL is configured on the access layer switch and used as a default ACL on the port. Its purpose is to prevent un-authorized access.An example of a default ACL on a campus access layer switch is shown below:Extended IP access list ACL-DEFAULT10 permit udp any eq bootpc any eq bootps log (2604 matches) 20 permit udp any host10.230.1.45 eq domain30 permit icmp any any40 permit udp any any eq tftp50 deny ip any any log (40 matches)As seen from the output above, ACL-DEFAULT allows DHCP, DNS, ICMP, and TFTP traffic and denies everything else.Source: http://www.cisco.com/c/en/us/td/docs/solutions/Enterprise/Borderless_Networks/Unified_Access/BYOD_Design_Guide/BYOD_Wired.html MAB is an access control technique that Cisco provides and it is called MAC Authentication Bypass.

NEW QUESTION: 2Service A is a task service that sends Service B a message (2) requesting that Service B return data back to Service A in a response message (3). Depending on the response received. Service A may be required to send a message to Service C (4) for which it requires no response.Before it contacts Service B, Service A must first retrieve a list of code values from its own database (1) and then place this data into its own memory. If it turns out that it must send a message to Service C, then Service A must combine the data it receives from Service B with the data from the code value list in order to create the message it sends to Service C.If Service A is not required to invoke Service C, it can complete its task by discarding the code values.Service A and Service C reside in Service Inventory A.Service B resides in Service Inventory B.You are told that the services in Service Inventory A were designed with service contracts based on different design standards than the services in Service Inventory B.As a result,Service A and Service B use different data models to represent the data they need to exchange. Therefore, Service A and Service B cannot currently communicate.Furthermore, Service C is an agnostic service that is heavily accessed by many concurrent service consumers. Service C frequently reaches its usage thresholds during which it is not available and messages sent to it are not received. How can this service composition architecture be changed to avoid these problems?A. The Data Model Transformation pattern can be applied by establishing an intermediate processing layer between Service A and Service B that can transform a message from one data model to another at runtime. The Intermediate Routing and Service Agent patterns can be applied so that when Service B sends a response message, a service agent can intercept the message and, based on its contents, either forward the message to Service A or route the message to Service C. The Service Statelessness principle can be applied with the help of the State Repository pattern so that Service A can write the code value data to a state database while it is waiting for Service B to respond.B. None of the above.C. The Data Model Transformation pattern can be applied by establishing an intermediate processing layer between Service A and Service B that can transform a message from one data model to another at runtime. The Intermediate Routing and Service Agent patterns can be applied so that when Service B sends a response message, a service agent can intercept the message and, based on its contents, either forward the message to Service A or route the message to Service C. The Service Autonomy principle can be further applied to Service C together with the Redundant Implementation pattern to help establish a more reliable and scalable service architecture. D. The Data Model Transformation pattern can be applied by establishing an intermediate processing layer between Service A and Service B that can transform a message from one data model to another at runtime. The Asynchronous Queuing pattern can be applied to establish an intermediate queue between Service A and Service C so that when Service A needs to send a message to Service C, the queue will store the message and retransmit it to Service C until it is successfully delivered. The Service Autonomy principle can be further applied to Service C together with the Redundant Implementation pattern to help establish a more reliable and scalable service architecture. Answer: D

NEW QUESTION: 3 An organization has two different Isilon clusters: Six-node cluster in London, England Eight-node cluster in Paris, France They are using SyncIQ to replicate between the clusters. Each site has access zones configured and SmartConnect Advanced is licensed. The organization is actively engaged in a failover from Paris to London. During testing, they realize that users from the Sales department in Paris are receiving authentication errors from the London cluster. Which step should be taken to troubleshoot this issue? A. Verify that the SmartConnect zone for Sales in Paris is set to the system access zone B. Verify that the London cluster retained the Paris user list C. Verify that the Sales access zones for London are configured on the Paris cluster D. Verify that the Sales access zones for Paris are configured on the London cluster Answer: D
