NEW QUESTION: 1 Which case determined that compensating employees for participation in work committees is not a violation of the National Labor Relations Act? A. E.I. DuPont & Co. v. NLRB (1993) B. McKennon v. Nashville Banner Publishing Company (1995) C. Electromation, Inc. v. NLRB (1992) D. Johnson v. Santa Clara County Transportation Agency (1987) Answer: C
Explanation: Explanation: Electromation, Inc. v. NLRB (1992) determined that compensating employees for participation in work committees is not a violation of the National Labor Relations Act. This case began when changes to a company's compensation policy were criticized by employees. The company's management allowed the employees to form committees and try to come up with solutions. However, the NLRB determined that management had too much influence in these committees. The ruling suggested, however, that compensating employees for their participation would not necessarily prejudice the proceedings.
