NEW QUESTION: 1A public retail web application uses an Application Load Balancer (ALB) in front of Amazon EC2 instances running across multiple Availability Zones (AZs) in a Region backed by an Amazon RDS MySQL Multi-AZ deployment. Target group health checks are configured to use HTTP and pointed at the product catalog page. Auto Scaling is configured to maintain the web fleet size based on the ALB health check. Recently, the application experienced an outage. Auto Scaling continuously replaced the instances during the outage. A subsequent investigation determined that the web server metrics were within the normal range, but the database tier was experiencing high load, resulting in severely elevated query response times. Which of the following changes together would remediate these issues while improving monitoring capabilities for the availability and functionality of the entire application stack for future growth? (Select TWO.)
A. Configure the target group health check to use a TCP check of the Amazon EC2 web server and the Amazon Route 53 health check against the product page to evaluate full application functionality. Configure Amazon CloudWatch alarms to notify administrators when the site fails.
B. Configure read replicas for Amazon RDS MySQL and use the single reader endpoint in the web application to reduce the load on the backend database tier.
C. Configure an Amazon CloudWatch alarm for Amazon RDS with an action to recover a high-load, impaired RDS instance in the database tier.
D. Configure an Amazon ElastiCache cluster and place it between the web application and RDS MySQL instances to reduce the load on the backend database tier.
E. Configure the target group health check to point at a simple HTML page instead of a product catalog page and the Amazon Route 53 health check against the product page to evaluate full application functionality. Configure Amazon CloudWatch alarms to notify administrators when the site fails.
Answer: D,E

NEW QUESTION: 2The best quality tool to use for gathering information about a specific problem is which of the following?
A. A Pareto chart
B. An Ishikawa diagram
C. A histogram
D. A stratification chart
Answer: B
Explanation: Answer option B is correct. An Ishikawa diagram is an effective tool for organizing information about a problem when brainstorming with a group. A Pareto chart (C) graphically represents the 80/20 rule. A stratification chart (A) shows the individual components of a problem in addition to the total or summary. A histogram (D) provides a way of looking at random occurrences to find out if there is a pattern. Chapter: Human Resource Development Objective: Review Questions

NEW QUESTION: 3A user is sending custom data metrics to CloudWatch. What is the allowed time stamp granularity for each data point published for the custom metric?
A. 1 nanosecond
B.

1 second
C. 1 millisecond
D. 1 minute
Answer: C
Explanation: Explanation/Reference:
Explanation: The user is allowed to send data up to one-thousandth of a second. CloudWatch aggregates the data by each minute and generates a metric for that.
