NEW QUESTION: 1 Which basis for prioritization allows the project team to work initially with lower-risk requirements first?
A. Relationship to other requirements
B. Quantitative ranking
C. Implementation difficulty
D. Positive risk ranking
Answer: C
Explanation: Explanation This approach prioritizes requirements that are easiest to implement first. This allows the project team to work with the lowest risk requirements first to gain familiarity with the requirements. This is especially useful with a new technology or materials where a learning curve is involved. Answer A is incorrect. There is not a prioritization basis for quantitative ranking. Answer B is incorrect. There is not a prioritization basis called positive risk ranking. Answer C is incorrect. The basis of relationship to other requirements is useful for requirements that need to be implemented so that other requirements, which are dependent on the initial requirements, can be implemented.
