NEW QUESTION: 2What is the name of the command line utility that checks for VMFS5 metadata corruption?A. vomaB. vmfsanalyzerC. esxcli vmfs checkD. vmkfstools -checkAnswer: A
Explanation:It is possible to check VMFS for metadata inconsistency with a tool called VOMA (Vmware Ondisk Metadata Analyser). With VOMA you can check VMFS3 and VMFS5 datastores. NEW QUESTION: 3The Oracle Grid Infrastructure administrator runs `ocrconfig -backupioc <new_location>` after completing the installation of the Grid Infrastructure. What are the two reasons for doing this?A. If for any reason CRS must be stopped on all nodes for a time spanning a scheduled backup, then on restart, the backup timer will be reset. This could result in longer time duration between automatic backups than the standard four-hour interval.B. The cluster node currently acting as the master node for CRS is the only node that backs up the OCR to the default location, and by changing the location, all cluster nodes will then take backups.C. The master node may change if the node running the master CRS daemon shuts down causing another node to become the master. Because the default location is a nonshared storage, and only the master node performs backups, the backups could be spread around on many nodes making management or recovery more difficult.D. This is done to move the backup location into an ASM Cluster File System directory so that the backups benefit from ASM striping and mirroring.Answer: A,C
Explanation:Changing the Automatic OCR Backup LocationThe automatic backup location should be changed to a location shared by all nodes.
`# ocrconfig -backuploc <path to shared CFS or NFS>`The backup location will be used for both automatic and manual backups.It is recommended that these files be included in routine scheduled backups to an offline location.If CRS has been stopped on all nodes, the schedule of backups is suspended.On restart, a backup is not immediately taken and the backup timer is reset.
