NEW QUESTION: 4You are using AI to install a new system. You have added to following information to the AI manifest: <configuration type= "zone" name= "dbzone" source = "http://sysA.example.com/zone_cfg/zone.cfg"/> Which statement is true with regard to the zone.cfg?A. The zone.cfg file is an SC profile with keywords that are specific for configuring a part of the installation process.B. The zone.cfg file is text file in a zonecfg export format.C. The zone.cfg file is an xml file in a form suitable for use as a command file for the zonecfg command.D. It is an xml configuration file from the /etc/zone directory. It will be used as a profile for the zone. It specifies the zonename, zonename, and other zonecfg parameters.E. The zone.cfg file is an AI manifest that specifies how the zone is to be installed.Answer: E Explanation: The configuration element supports non-global zone configurations. When installing a global zone system, the zone configurations specified in the AI manifest are used to install non-global zones onto the system after the global zone has been installed. The configuration element has the following attributes: type The type of configuration to install. The only type supported by AI is zone.name A name given to the configuration. This name must be unique across all configuration elements in an AI manifest. For configurations of type zone, this name is also used as the zone name for the zone. Source The location from which AI downloads the configuration file for this configuration element. The value can be an HTTP or FILE URI specification. For configurations of type zone, this value should point to a zone configuration file as produced from the zonecfg export command.
