Explanation: The dividend growth model is used to calculate the cost of equity. The simplified formula is $R = \frac{D}{P} + G$. The required rate of return, D is the next dividend, P is the share's price, and G is the growth rate in earnings per share. The equation is also used to determine the share price. Thus, when investors have a lower required return on equity, the denominator is smaller, which translates into a higher market value.
