NEW QUESTION: 1 Maintenance workers find an active network switch hidden above a dropped-ceiling tile in the CEO's office with various connected cables from the office. Which of the following describes the type of attack that was occurring?
A. Packet sniffing
B. MAC flooding
C. Impersonation
D. Spear phishing
Answer: A
Explanation: A Protocol Analyzer is a hardware device or more commonly a software program used to capture network data communications sent between devices on a network. Capturing packets sent from a computer system is known as packet sniffing. However, packet sniffing requires a physical connection to the network. The switch hidden in the ceiling is used to provide the physical connection to the network. Well known software protocol analyzers include Message Analyzer (formerly Network Monitor) from Microsoft and Wireshark (formerly Ethereal). A sniffer (packet sniffer) is a tool that intercepts data flowing in a network. If computers are connected to a local area network that is not filtered or switched, the traffic can be broadcast to all computers contained in the same segment. This doesn't generally occur, since computers are generally told to ignore all the comings and goings of traffic from other computers. However, in the case of a sniffer, all traffic is shared when the sniffer software commands the Network Interface Card (NIC) to stop ignoring the traffic. The NIC is put into promiscuous mode, and it reads communications between computers within a particular segment. This allows the sniffer to seize everything that is flowing in the network, which can lead to the unauthorized access of sensitive data. A packet sniffer can take the form of either a hardware or software solution. A sniffer is also known as a packet analyzer.

Explanation:See explanation below.Explanation1. If you haven't already done so, open a new browser window and sign in to the Azure portal. Then navigate to the Azure Information Protection pane.For example, in the search box for resources, services, and docs: Start typing Information and select Azure Information Protection.2. From the Classifications > Labels menu option: On the Azure Information Protection - Labels pane, select the label you want to change. On the Label pane, locate Set permissions for documents and emails containing this label, and select Protect.3. Select Protection.4. On the Protection pane, select Azure (cloud key).5. Select Set permissions to define new protection settings in this portal.6. If you selected Set permissions for Azure (cloud key), this option lets you select users and usage rights.To specify the users that you want to be able to open protected documents and emails, select Add permissions.Then on the Add permissions pane, select the first set of users and groups who will have rights to use the content that will be protected by the selected label:* Choose Select from the list where you can then add all users from your organization by selecting Add<organization name> - All members. This setting excludes guest accounts. Or, you can select Add any authenticated users, or browse the directory.When you choose all members or browse the directory, the users or groups must have an email address. In a production environment, users and groups nearly always have an email address, but in a simple testing environment, you might need to add email addresses to user accounts or groups.* Change the File Content Expiration setting to 21 days.* Change the Allow offline access setting to 21 days.When you have finished configuring the permissions and settings, click OK.This grouping of settings creates a custom template for the Azure Rights Management service. These templates can be used with applications and services that integrate with Azure Rights Management.7. Click OK to close the Protection pane and see your choice of User defined or your chosen template display for the Protection option in the Label pane.8. On the Label pane, click Save.9. On the Azure Information Protection pane, use the PROTECTION column to confirm that your label now displays the protection setting that you want:* A check mark if you have configured protection.* An x mark to denote cancellation if you have configured a label to remove protection.* A blank field when protection is not set.When you clicked Save, your changes are automatically available to users and services. There's no longer a separate publish option.Reference: <https://docs.microsoft.com/en-us/azure/information-protection/configure-policy-protection>
