(Choose two)A. The application program receives an addressing exception.B. There is a head crash on the disk containing a database file.C. The user issues an abnormal interrupt.D. There is a logic error in the application.E. A table is accidentally truncated.Answer: D, E*Explanation:If a table was accidentally truncated or there was a logic error in the application, it can cause a user process failure. If a user process terminates, then the process monitor (PMON) background process intervenes, which saves the DBA some time and effort. PMON is here to handle automatic process recovery for the database: when PMON detects the process failure, PMON rolls back the failed process and releases locks on the tables.Incorrect Answers:B: If the user issues an abnormal interrupt, it does not cause a user process failure.D: If application program receives an addressing exception it's application error, not user one.E: It's media failure if there is a head crash on the disk containing a database file.
