NEW QUESTION: 1What are the differences between holding and parking documents? (There are two correct answers.)A. The held document can be incomplete.B. The held document doesn't have a document number assigned.C. The parked document can trigger workflow processes.D. The parked document is considered for financial statements.Answer: B,C
Explanation:Held documents don't receive a document number (though the user assigns an identifier to be able to retrieve them). Only document parking is integrated with the SAP Business Workflow. On the other hand, both parked and held documents can be saved incomplete, and neither held nor parked documents are included in financial statements.

NEW QUESTION: 2Which statement describes a difference between the TX9000 and the TX9200?A. The TX9000 supports SIP and the TX9200 supports H.323.B. The TX9000 has a single row of seating and the TX9200 has two rows of seatingC. The TX9000 has a single screen and the TX9200 has three screens.D. The TX9000 supports H 264 and the TX9200 supports H 265.
Answer: B

NEW QUESTION: 3Which protocol authenticates connected devices before allowing them to access the LAN?A. 802.1wB. 802.11C. 802.1xD. 802.1dAnswer: C
Explanation:
Explanation/Reference:Explanation:802.1X authentication involves three parties: a supplicant, an authenticator, and an authentication server.The supplicant is a client device (such as a laptop) that wishes to attach to the LAN/WLAN. The term'supplicant' is also used interchangeably to refer to the software running on the client that provides credentials to the authenticator. The authenticator is a network device, such as an Ethernet switch or wireless access point; and the authentication server is typically a host running software supporting the RADIUS and EAP protocols.The authenticator acts like a security guard to a protected network. The supplicant (i.e., client device) is not allowed access through the authenticator to the protected side of the network until the supplicant's identity has been validated and authorized.

An analogy to this is providing a valid visa at the airport's arrival immigration before being allowed to enter the country. With 802.1X port-based authentication, the supplicant provides credentials, such as user name/password or digital certificate, to the authenticator, and the authenticator forwards the credentials to the authentication server for verification. If the authentication server determines the credentials are valid, the supplicant (client device) is allowed to access resources located on the protected side of the network.
