NEW QUESTION: 1 The operations team and the development team want a single place to view both operating system and application logs. How should you implement this using AWS services? Choose two from the options below. A. Using AWS CloudFormation, merge the application logs with the operating system logs, and use IAM Roles to allow both teams to have access to view console output from Amazon EC2. B. Using AWS CloudFormation, create a CloudWatch Logs LogGroup and send the operating system and application logs of interest using the CloudWatch Logs Agent. C. Using configuration management, set up remote logging to send events to Amazon Kinesis and insert these into Amazon CloudSearch or Amazon Redshift, depending on available analytic tools. D. Using AWS CloudFormation and configuration management, set up remote logging to send events via UDP packets to CloudTrail. Answer: B,C
Explanation: Explanation Option B is invalid because CloudTrail is not designed specifically to take in UDP packets Option D is invalid because there are already CloudWatch logs available, so there is no need to have specific logs designed for this. You can use Amazon CloudWatch Logs to monitor, store, and access your log files from Amazon Elastic Compute Cloud (Amazon EC2) instances, AWS CloudTrail, and other sources. You can then retrieve the associated log data from CloudWatch Logs. For more information on CloudWatch logs please refer to the below link:
