NEW QUESTION: 2 Your company has an Active Directory domain and an organizational unit. The organizational unit is named Web. You configure and test new security settings for Internet Information Service (IIS) Servers on a server named IISServerA. You need to deploy the new security settings only on the IIS servers that are members of the Web organizational unit. What should you do? A. Export the settings on IISServerA to create a security template. Import the security template into a GPO and link the GPO to the Web organizational unit. B. Export the settings on IISServerA to create a security template. Run `secedit /configure /db webou.inf` from the command prompt. C. Run `secedit /configure /db iis.inf` from the command prompt on IISServerA, then run `secedit /configure /db webou.inf` from the command prompt. D. Import the `hisecls.inf` file template into a GPO and link the GPO to the Web organizational unit. Answer: A
Explanation: <http://www.itninja.com/blog/view/using-secedit-to-apply-security-templates>
Using Secedit To Apply Security Templates
`secedit /configure /db secedit.sdb /cfg "c:\temp\custom.inf" /silent >nul` This command imports a security template file, "custom.inf" into the workstation's or server's local security database. /db must be specified. When specifying the default security database (secedit.sdb,) I found that providing no path worked best. The /cfg option informs Secedit that it is to import the .inf file into the specified database, appending it to any existing .inf files that have already been imported to this system. You can optionally include an /overwrite switch to overwrite all previous configurations for this machine. The /silent option suppresses any pop-ups and the >nul hides the command line output stating success or failure of the action.

NEW QUESTION: 3 A. Backup Strategy B. Design Requirements Workbook C. Operating Procedures D. Validation Procedures E. Implementation Guide Answer: B, C, E

NEW QUESTION: 4 A developer created a rule in Adobe Experience Platform Launch, but the rule is not visible when testing the development library. What went wrong? A. A new rule takes time to be processed. B. The rule was not built to the correct working library. C. A new rule can only be tested in the staging environment. D. A new rule is disabled by default. Answer: B
