A. between host 1 and switch 1 B. between switch 2 and switch 3 C. between the authentication server and switch 4 D. between switch 1 and switch 2 E. between switch 1 and switch 5 F. between switch 5 and host 2 Answer: C,F

NEW QUESTION: 3 Which two options are ways in which an OSPFv3 router handles hello packets with a clear address-family bit? (Choose two.)

A. IPv4 unicast packets are forwarded. B. IPv6 unicast packets are forwarded. C. IPv4 unicast packets are discarded. D. IPv6 unicast packets are discarded. Answer: B,C

Explanation: A typical distance vector protocol saves the following information when computing the best path to a destination: the distance (total metric or distance, such as hop count) and the vector (the next hop). For instance, all the routers in the network in Figure 1 are running Routing Information Protocol (RIP). Router Two chooses the path to Network A by examining the hop count through each available path. Since the path through Router Three is three hops, and the path through Router One is two hops, Router Two chooses the path through One and discards the information it learned through Three. If the path between Router One and Network A goes down, Router Two loses all connectivity with this destination until it times out the route of its routing table (three update periods, or 90 seconds), and Router Three re-advertises the route (which occurs every 30 seconds in RIP). Not including any hold-down time, it will take between 90 and 120 seconds for Router Two to switch the path from Router One to Router Three. EIGRP, instead of counting on full periodic updates to re-converge, builds a topology table from each of its neighbor's advertisements (rather than discarding the data), and converges by either looking for a likely loop-free route in the topology table, or, if it knows of no other route, by querying its neighbors. Router Two saves the information it received from both Routers One and Three. It chooses the path through One as its best path (the successor) and the path through Three as a loop-free path (a feasible successor). When the path through Router One becomes unavailable, Router Two examines its topology table and, finding a feasible successor, begins using the path through Three immediately.
