Answer: A

NEW QUESTION: 2 Which report can you use to display all currently unassigned directory numbers?
A. IP Phone Number Assignment
B. Directory Number Assignment
C. Unassigned Objects Report
D. Route Plan Report
Answer: D
Explanation: Route Plan Report
The route plan report lists all assigned and unassigned directory numbers (DN), call park numbers, call pickup numbers, conference numbers, route patterns, translation patterns, message-waiting indicators, voice mail ports, and Cisco CallManager Attendant Console pilot numbers in the system. The route plan report allows you to view either a partial or full list and to go directly to the associated configuration windows by clicking the Pattern/Directory Number, Partition, or Route Detail fields. In addition, the route plan report allows you to save report data into a .csv file that you can import into other applications. The .csv file contains more detailed information than the web pages, including directory numbers for phones, route patterns, pattern usage, device name, and device description. Cisco CallManager uses the route plan to route both internal calls and external public switched telephone network (PSTN) calls. For more detailed information on the route plan, refer to the "Understanding Route Plans" section in Cisco CallManager System Guide. Link:
