NEW QUESTION: 1You have an application server that needs to copy data on Oracle Cloud Infrastrucutre (OCI) objectstorage in the same region. You have created a service gateway for OCI object storage in your virtualcloud network (VCN) and modified security lists associated with the subnet to allow traffic to the servicegateway. You are able to connect to the OCI object storage, however, you notice that the connectivity isover the Internet instead of the service gateway.What is the reason for this behavior?A. Identity and Access Management (IAM) policies restrict the access to the object storage bucketB. The security list associated with the subnet has an egress rule that allows all traffic to be forwarded toa destination CIDR 0.0.0.0/0C. The route table associated with the subnet has no route rule where the destination is object storage serviceD. The service gateway created in the VCN resides in a different availability domain
