NEW QUESTION: 1 My domain consists of an administration server and two managed servers. During runtime, my administration server has crashed and I wish to start the managed servers in MSI mode. Which two files need to be copied from the admin server to the managed servers when starting them in this mode? (Choose two.) A. AdminServer.log B. MSI.xml C. config.xml D. SerializedSystemIni.dat E. access.log Answer: C, D Explanation: In Managed Server Independence mode, a Managed Server looks in its root directory for the following files: * msi-config.xml - a replica of the domain's config.xml. (Even if the domain's configuration file is named something other than config.xml, a Managed Server in MSI mode always looks for a configuration file named msi-config.xml.) * SerializedSystemIni.dat * boot.properties - an optional file that contains an encrypted version of your username and password. Note: When a Managed Server starts, it tries to contact the Administration Server to retrieve its configuration information. If a Managed Server cannot connect to the Administration Server during startup, it can retrieve its configuration by reading configuration and security files directly. A Managed Server that starts in this way is running in Managed Server Independence (MSI) mode References:
