NEW QUESTION: 1 Which three statements about implementing an application layer gateway in a network are true? (Choose three.)A. It maintains granular security over application-specific data.B. It allows client applications to use dynamic ports to communicate with a server regardless of whether NAT is being used.C. Application layer gateway is used only in VoIP/SIP deployments.D. An application layer gateway inspects only the first 64 bytes of a packet before forwarding it through the network.E. It allows synchronization between multiple streams of data between two hosts.F. Client applications require additional configuration to use an application layer gateway.Answer: A,B,EExplanation:An ALG may offer the following functions: - allowing client applications to use dynamic ephemeral TCP/ UDP ports to communicate with the known ports used by the server applications, even though a firewall configuration may allow only a limited number of known ports. In the absence of an ALG, either the ports would get blocked or the network administrator would need to explicitly open up a large number of ports in the firewall - rendering the network vulnerable to attacks on those ports.- converting the network layer address information found inside an application payload between the addresses acceptable by the hosts on either side of the firewall/NAT. This aspect introduces the term 'gateway' for an ALG.- recognizing application-specific commands and offering granular security controls over them- synchronizing between multiple streams/sessions of data between two hosts exchanging data. For example, an FTP application may use separate connections for passing control commands and for exchanging data between the client and a remote server. During large file transfers, the control connection may remain idle. An ALG can prevent the control connection getting timed out by network devices before the lengthy file transfer completes.Reference: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Application-level_gateway
