NEW QUESTION: 3 Your network contains a System Center 2012 Configuration Manager environment. Your company deploys 1,000 client computers. You discover that information about printers fails to appear in any inventory queries or reports. Information about other hardware devices appears in the inventory queries and reports. You need to ensure that Configuration Manager data includes information about the printers. What should you do? A. Modify the Enable software inventory on clients setting. B. Enable a default WMI class in the Hardware Inventory Classes list. C. Modify the Enable hardware inventory on clients setting. D. Add a file name to the Software Inventory configuration. E. Select Collect NOIDMIF files in Hardware Inventory. F. Add a WMI class to the Sms_def.mof file. G. Add a file name to the Hardware inventory configuration. H. Add a WMI class to the Hardware inventory Classes list. I. Add a file name to Software Metering. Answer: B Explanation: Hardware Inventory Class All objects in AD are instances of classes defined in the AD schema. The schema provides definitions for common objects such as users, computers, and printers Adding new device/class to hardware inventory- In the hardware inventory class window click the add button- Next click the 'Connect' button- Select the desired class and click 'Edit' - Give your new device/class a friendly name (instead of the default class name)- Now you can select the properties you want to add (as you did in the previous section).- You can see the result in the resource explorer: Hardware inventory works by querying Windows Management Instrumentation (WMI) for all data from certain WMI classes. WMI includes classes for operating system configuration and entities (such as user accounts), installed software, software configuration, and other objects (such as for the logged on user). These classes are supplements to hardware classes. Hardware inventory collects information about many things besides hardware. For example, it can inventory software by collecting details about programs listed in Add or Remove Programs in Control Panel or programs that have been installed using Windows Installer. Most of your inventory needs can be served by hardware inventory collection alone.
