NEW QUESTION: 2 Your company has decided to make a major revision of their API in order to create better experiences for their developers. They need to keep the old version of the API available and deployable, while allowing new customers and testers to try out the new API. They want to keep the same SSL and DNS records in place to serve both APIs. What should they do? A. Have the old API forward traffic to the new API based on the path. B. Reconfigure old clients to use a new endpoint for the new API. C. Configure a new load balancer for the new version of the API. D. Use separate backend pools for each API path behind the load balancer. Answer: D Explanation: A is not correct because a single load balancer with URL maps is sufficient. B is not correct because it goes against the requirements. The company wants to keep the old API available while new customers and testers try the new API. C is not correct because it is not a requirement to decommission the implementation behind the old API. Moreover, it introduces unnecessary risk in case bugs or incompatibilities are discovered in the new API. D is correct because an HTTP(S) load balancer can direct traffic reaching a single IP to different backends based on the incoming URL.

NEW QUESTION: 3 SIMULATION The Secure-X company has recently successfully tested the 802.1X authentication deployment using the Cisco Catalyst switch and the Cisco ISE v1.2 appliance. Currently, each employee desktop is connected to an 802.1X enabled switch port and is able to use the Cisco AnyConnect NAM 802.1X supplicant to log in and connect to the network. Currently, a new testing requirement is to add a network printer to the Fa0/19 switch port and have it connect to the network. The network printer does not support 802.1X supplicant. The Fa0/19 switch port is now configured to use 802.1X authentication only. To support this network printer, the Fa0/19 switch port configuration needs to be edited to enable the network printer to authenticate using its MAC address. The network printer should also be on VLAN 9. Another network security engineer responsible for managing the Cisco ISE has already per-configured all the requirements on the Cisco ISE, including adding the network printer MAC address to the Cisco ISE endpoint database and etc... Your task in the simulation is to access the Cisco Catalyst Switch console then use the CLI to: * Enable only the Cisco Catalyst Switch Fa0/19 switch port to authenticate the network printer using its MAC address and: * Ensure that MAC address authentication processing is not delayed until 802.1X fails * Ensure that even if MAC address authentication passes, the switch will still perform 802.1X authentication if requested by a 802.1X supplicant * Use the required show command to verify the MAC address authentication on the Fa0/19 is successful The switch enable password is Cisco For the purpose of the simulation, to test the network printer, assume the network printer will be unplugged then plugged back into the Fa0/19 switch port after you have finished the required configurations on the Fa0/19 switch port. Note: For this simulation, you will not need and do not have access to the ISE GUI To access the switch CLI, click the Switch icon in the topology diagram Answer: Explanation: Review the explanation for full configuration and solution. Explanation/Reference: Explanation: Initial configuration for fa 0/19 that is already done: AAA configuration has already been done for us. We need to configure mac address bypass on this port to achieve the goal stated in the question. To do this we simply need to add this command under the interface: mab Then do a shut/no shut on the interface. Verification:
