NEW QUESTION: 1 Jill uses her MacBook late at night and occasionally has to restart. Despite having muted the speaker volume the MacBook always boot chimes loudly after restart. What step should you try first to resolve this issue? A. Reset the PRAM. B. Repair disk permissions. C. Reset the SMC. D. Reinstall Snow Leopard. Answer: A

NEW QUESTION: 2 Which two statements are true about Log Filters? A. You can apply a Log Filter to the server log, but not to standard out. B. The administration console assists in the creation of Log Filter expressions. C. You do not have to lock the configuration to create Log Filters. D. Log Filters are created at the domain level. Answer: B, D
Explanation:
Explanation/Reference: Explanation: A (not B): For any given WebLogic Server instance, you can override the default filter and create a log filter that causes a different set of messages to be written to the domain log file. Note: To create and configure a log filter: The new log filter appears in the Log Filters table. A filter expression defines simple filtering rules to limit the volume of log messages written to a particular log destination. See D) below. The filter and filter expression are listed in the Log Filters table. D: Log Filter Configuration Use this page to define a custom log filter to restrict the set of messages that one or more servers send to a message destination, such as the domain log, standard out, server log file, or memory buffer of recent log events. You can click Edit to type or paste in an expression directly, using WLDF Query Language syntax (see Related Topics, below); or you can click Add Expression to construct an expression by choosing items from lists. Once you create a filter, you cannot change its name. Instead, you must create a new filter under a different name. References:

NEW QUESTION: 3 Which of the following statements regarding IP address 224.0.0.1 are correct? A. It represents all the routers. B. It represents all the hosts and routers. C. It is a multicast IP address. D. It is a private IP address. Answer: B
