NEW QUESTION: 4Your network contains two DHCP servers named Server1 and Server2. On Server1, you create a scope named Scope1.You need to ensure that DHCP clients receive IP addresses from the address range in Scope1 if Server1 is unavailable.The solution must prevent both servers from assigning duplicate IP addresses.What should you do from the DHCP console?A. On Server2, create a scope, and then reconcile each scope.B. On Server1, create a superscope.C. On Server2, create a scope, and then enable Network Access Protection.D. On Server1, select Scope1, and then run the Split-Scope wizard.Answer: DExplanation:We basically want a split-scope to implement the 80/20 rule, as that will provide the best fault tolerance in DHCP (clients can receive addresses if Server1 is unavailable). This is now done with a Split-Scope wizard in Server 2008.A Dynamic Host Configuration Protocol (DHCP) split-scope configuration using multiple DHCP servers allows for increased fault tolerance and redundancy over using only one DHCP server. The new Split-scope Wizard in Windows Server@ 2008 R2 replaces the more error prone manual split-scope configuration method used in earlier versions of Windows Server.Reference:

<http://technet.microsoft.com/en-us/library/ee405264%28v=ws.10%29.aspx>WRONG ANSWERSA superscope is an administrative feature of DHCP servers running Windows Server 2003 that you can create and manage through the DHCP console. Using a superscope, you can group multiple scopes as a single administrative entity. (MY NOTE: This does not give us fault tolerance amongst scopes)Reference:
