NEW QUESTION: 1 You are developing a Windows Store app to connect to a server and download files that are larger than 500 MB to the local file system. You need to recommend a technology to download the files. Which technology should you recommend? (More than one answer choice may achieve the goal. Select the BEST answer.)
A. XML HTTP Request
B. web Sockets
C. Background Transfer
D. HTTP Client
Answer: C
Explanation: To provide a consistent experience when downloading larger media (video and music) with an operational lifetime that may span beyond multiple app suspensions and/or changes in network availability, your app can use Background Transfer. Note: You can now use XMLHttpRequest to upload or download objects that are larger than a few MB, such as Blob objects and FormData objects, which may take a long time to complete. Because apps can be terminated at any time, you should consider using the Windows Runtime background transfer APIs for these operations.
