NEW QUESTION: 1 Which of the following can you perform in me System -> Workflow area of Blue Prism? (select all that apply) A. Encrypt a Work Queue B. create a Work Queue C. View the contents of a Work Queue D. Refresh a Work Queue Answer: A,B

NEW QUESTION: 2 Your network contains two servers named Server1 and Server2 that run Microsoft SQL Server. All of the databases on Server1 are mirrored to Server2. You have a SharePoint Server 2010 Service Pack 1 (SP1) server farm that is configured to use Server1 as the database server for all of the databases. You need to ensure that users can access all SharePoint sites if Server1 fails. What should you configure? A. a failover server for each service application B. a failover server for each content database C. a failover server for each SharePoint database D. the Business Data Connectivity service application Answer: C Explanation: Mirroring Support for SharePoint 2010 Databases Like all systems built on top of SQL Server SharePoint 2010 needs to have a plan for availability. There are many methods for configuring high availability, one of which is database mirroring. Other options, such as clustering will be discussed separately. Database mirroring is a SQL Server technology used for providing database redundancy. It is configured on a database level, not the server level. With this method any transaction on the the principal server are sent to the mirror server/database as soon as the transaction log buffer is written to disk on the principal server/database. The downtime in failover is generally measured in seconds, not minutes. SharePoint supports both mirroring and clustering for failover. While both do a great job in the case of a failure the question often comes up as to what databases support each option. Many service applications create their own databases, such as the Search Service creating an administration, crawl and property database. The vast majority of the databases support mirroring with the exception of only two at the time of writing. Keep in mind this is information taken from MSDN and applied to SQL

Server 2008 R2 and SharePoint 2010. This information could change for SQL Server 2012 as the back end or with future versions of SharePoint. The only two databases that do not support mirroring are: User Profile Service: Synchronization database Web Analytics Service: Staging database

NEW QUESTION: 3 Establishing a method to erase or clear cluster tips is an example of securing which of the following?
A. Data at rest
B. Data in use
C. Data in motion
D. Data in transit
Answer: A
Explanation: A computer hard disk is divided into small segments called clusters. A file stored on a hard disk usually spans several clusters but rarely fills the last cluster, which is called cluster tip. This cluster tip area may contain file data because the size of the file you are working with may grow or shrink and needs to be securely deleted. Data stored on the hard drive is called data at rest.
