NEW QUESTION: 2Which of the following provides the MOST comprehensive filtering of Peer-to-Peer (P2P) traffic?A. Access layer switchB. Application proxyC. Network boundary routerD. Port filterAnswer: A

NEW QUESTION: 3Where is the SGACL source and destination information specified?A. ACL entryB. MACsecC. Permissions matrixD. SGFW policyAnswer: CExplanation:It is important to note that the source and destinations are specified in the policy matrix and not in the Security Group Access Control List (SGACL). For example, the SGACL entry "deny tcp dst eq21" specifies that access from the source to the destination's TCP port 21 is denied. There is no specification of the source or destination group tags in the SGACL. It is the application of the SGACL in the permissions matrix that specifies the source and destination security groups. The source and destination information is not specified in the Access Control List (ACL) entry. Using role-based permissions greatly reduces the size of ACLs and simplifies their maintenance. This information is specified in the permissions matrix. MACsec is the IEEE 802.1AE standard for authenticating and encrypting packets between two MACsec-capable devices. It is not a system for storing Security Group Access Control List (SGACL) source and destination information. Cisco TrustSec security group tag (SGT) policy enforcement is applied on a router using SGFW. Instead of Security Group Access Control Lists (SGACLs), the Cisco Adaptive Security Appliance and select routing platforms enforce TrustSec policy using Security Group Firewall (SGFW) features. As the device is using an SGACL to control access, it can be determined this is a switch and therefore SGFW would not be implemented on the device.
