NEW QUESTION: 1You have an Exchange Server 2013 organization that contains mailboxes for multiple companies. You need to segment the address lists in the organization per company. What should you assign to the users of each company?A. Global Address Lists (GALs)B. Address book policies (ABPs)C. Address listsD. Email address policiesAnswer: B*Explanation: Technically, answers A and C are correct as users are "assigned" ABPs and GALs during the process of GAL segmentation. I have chosen A as the answer however, as the overall process falls under the heading of "Address Book Policies"

http://technet.microsoft.com/en-us/library/hh529948\(v=exchg.150\).aspx.aspx) Address Book Policies Global address list (GAL) segmentation (also known as GAL segregation) is the process whereby administrators can segment users into specific populations to provide customized views of their organization's GAL. Address book policies (ABPs) allow you to segment users into specific groups to provide customized views of your organization's global address list (GAL). When creating an ABP, you assign a GAL, an offline address book (OAB), a room list, and one or more address lists to the policy. You can then assign the ABP to mailbox users, providing them with access to a customized GAL in Outlook and Outlook Web App. The goal is to provide a simpler mechanism to accomplish GAL segmentation for on-premises organizations that require multiple GALs.

NEW QUESTION: 2Refer to the exhibits. Exhibit 1 Exhibit 2 A network administrator deploys role-based tunneled node in a corporate network to unify the security policies enforcement. When users authenticate with 802.1X, ClearPass shows Accept results, and sends the HPE-User-Role attribute as expected. However, the switch always applies the denyall role. Why does the switch fail to allocate the tunnel-employee role?A. The switch is not configured with secondary tunneled-node user role.B. RADIUS Access Accept messages time out in the switch.C. The switch is not configured with primary tunneled-node user role.D. Denyall is a secondary role contained within tunnel-employee.Answer: C

NEW QUESTION: 3An IS auditor recommends that an initial validation control be programmed into a credit card transaction capture application. The initial validation process would MOST likely:A. verify the format of the number entered then locate it on the database.B. confirm that the card is not shown as lost or stolen on the master file.C. ensure that the transaction entered is within the cardholder's credit limit.D. check to ensure that the type of transaction is valid for the card type.Answer: A*Explanation:The initial validation should confirm whether the card is valid. This validity is established through the card number and PIN entered by the user. Based on this initial validation, all other validations will proceed. A validation control in data capture will ensure that the data entered is valid (i.e., it can be processed by the system). If the data captured in the initial validation is not valid (if the card number or PIN do not match with the database), then the card will be rejected or captured per the controls in place. Once initial validation is completed, then other validations specific to the card and cardholder would be performed.
