For accounting purposes, the lessee treats a finance lease as similar to the purchase of an asset capitalized at the fair value of the leased asset or, if lower the present value of the minimum lease payments. The lessee's minimum lease payments include the required payments, excluding contingent rent and executor costing taxes and insurance), plus any amounts guaranteed by the lessee or a related party. If a bargain purchase option exists, however, minimum lease payments equal the required payments plus the amount of the option. If the present value of the minimum lease payments calculated without guaranteed amounts or a bargain purchase option) is substantially all of the asset's fair value, the lease normally is accounted for as a finance lease. Given that the executor costs associated with the lease are to be paid by the lesser.A portion of the lease rental price is for those costs. not for the asset. Consequently the annual minimum lease payment equals the annual payment minus the executory costs. or US $3,500$4,000 yearly rental - $500). The present value of the minimum lease payments is therefore US $9,590 ($3,500 x 2.74), which is substantially all of the fair value of the asset. Thus the lease should be capitalized. The appropriate amount of the initial asset value is the present value of the minimum lease payments calculated above.
