NEW QUESTION: 1 Refer to the exhibit. During troubleshooting of Virtual PortChannel (vPC), it is observed that Virtual PortChannel 2 is in a down state. What's the cause of this issue?
A. Virtual PortChannel is down because LACP is not enabled on the remote switch.
B. Virtual PortChannel is down because of VLAN and MTU mismatch.
C. Virtual PortChannel is down because of a VLAN mismatch.
D. Virtual PortChannel is down because of an MTU mismatch.
Answer: D
Explanation: Virtual Port Channels are actually a big part of the Networkers presentation I have done for the last 2 years, so I am familiar with a lot of the issues people have with them. I have heard issues you raise discussed before, and we are working on making it better. I think some of the newer features would help your reader. The consistency checker exists to keep bad things from happening on your vPC port-channel (like "unexplained" packet drops). There are two types of consistency check failures. The ones that will bring down the entire port-channel (these are type 1s) and the ones that will only cause an error, or keep a single or group of VLANs from becoming active on the port-channel (type 2). Decisions for what a type 1 and 2 are were made by the engineering team. For example the MTU mismatch will bring your vPC port-channel down, and it does so in a non vPC port-channel as well. I am sure that you can see the types of issues that having a link with a MTU of 9000 and one of 1500 can cause for a port-channel.
