NEW QUESTION: 1 Which three statements are true types of value sets? (Choose three.)
A. An Independent value set performs basic checking but also checks a value that is entered against the list of approved values.
B. A Dependent value set can be associated only with an Independent value set.
C. Dependent value set can be associated with any type of value set.
D. An Independent value set can be associated only with a Dependent value set.
E. A None value set performs only minimal checking of data type and length.
Answer: A, B, E
Explanation:
B: You use a None type value set when you want to allow users to enter any value so long as that value meets the value set formatting rules. That is, the value must not exceed the maximum length you define for your value set, and it must meet any format requirements for that value set.
C: A dependent value set is similar to an independent value set, except that the available values in the list and the meaning of a given value depend on which independent value was selected in a prior segment of the flexfield structure. You can think of a dependent value set as a collection of little value sets, with one little set for each independent value in the corresponding independent value set. You must define your independent value set before you define the dependent value set that depends on it.
Note: Independent and dependent value sets have a special relationship. While you can have the same dependent values for any of your independent values, the meanings (or descriptions) - as well as any segment qualifier values, enabled/activation information and descriptive flexfield data for that value - of the dependent values depend on which of the independent values you choose in the prior independent segment. You must set up your independent-dependent value sets carefully using the following sequence:
Create your independent value set first
Create your dependent value set, specifying a default value
Define your independent values
Define your dependent values
