NEW QUESTION: 3A common way to create fault tolerance with leased lines is to group several T1s together with an inverse multiplexer placed:
A. at one end of the connection.
B. in the middle of the connection.
C. at both ends of the connection.
D. somewhere between both end points.
Answer: C
Explanation: Explanation/Reference: A common way to create fault tolerance with leased lines is to group several T1s together with an inverse multiplexer placed at both ends of the connection. In fact it would be a Multiplexer at one end and DeMultiplexer at other end or vice versa. Inverse Multiplexer at both end. In electronics, a multiplexer (or mux) is a device that selects one of several analog or digital input signals and forwards the selected input into a single line. A multiplexer of 2^n inputs has n select lines, which are used to select which input line to send to the output. Multiplexers are mainly used to increase the amount of data that can be sent over the network within a certain amount of time and bandwidth. A multiplexer is also called a data selector. An electronic multiplexer makes it possible for several signals to share one device or resource, for example one A/D converter or one communication line, instead of having one device per input signal. On the other hand, a demultiplexer (or demux) is a device taking a single input signal and selecting one of many data-output-lines, which is connected to the single input. A multiplexer is often used with a complementary demultiplexer on the receiving end. An electronic multiplexer can be considered as a multiple-input, single-output switch, and a demultiplexer as a single-input, multiple-output switch.
