NEW QUESTION: 2Which two next-generation encryption algorithms does Cisco recommend? (Choose two.)A. 3DES B. DH-1024 C. MD5 D. DESE. AES F. SHA-384*Answer: E, F*Explanation:The following table shows the relative security level provided by the recommended and NGE algorithms. The security level is the relative strength of an algorithm. An algorithm with a security level of x bits is stronger than one of y bits if $x > y$. If an algorithm has a security level of x bits, the relative effort it would take to "beat" the algorithm is of the same magnitude of breaking a secure x-bit symmetric key algorithm (without reduction or other attacks). The 128-bit security level is for sensitive information and the 192-bit level is for information of higher importance. Reference:
