NEW QUESTION: 1Mark Taber, CFA, is the Chief Investment Officer of the Taber Emerging Markets Fund, (TEMF). Taber uses a top-down approach to investing in countries. By interviewing government officials and the managements of foreign companies, Taber often gains economic and investment insights not yet fully understood by the foreign market. Taber is currently researching a potential investment in the emerging market country of Alpha. Taber travels to Ullom, the capital of Alpha, to discuss past, present, and future economic growth theory development with Dr. Raman Satish, managing director of the Alpha Economic Development Agency (AEDA).Dr. Satish starts the conversation with Taber by discussing the three great growth cycles that the Alphanian economy has experienced over the past 120 years: (1) the classical growth era, (2) the neoclassical growth era, and (3) the new growth era. Taber takes down the following statements from the meeting with Dr. Satish's meeting.1. The Classical Growth Era of Alpha (1850-1950)This hundred-year era was noted for periodic high levels of population growth and the sporadic introductions of technology. The average Alphanian's income was very modest and the standard of living remained almost the same over the 100-ycar period, except when new technology was introduced. Dr.Satish cites the example of the one-time introduction of electricity to the Alphanian economy from 1947 to1950. E 2. The Neoclassical Growth Era o/Alpha (1951-1990)During the neoclassical growth period, Alpha experienced a period of great economic growth. For example, from 1986 to 1990, Alpha's capital per hour of labor grew at a 9% annual rate, while real GDP grew at 7% per annum.Also, Alpha was able to achieve economic growth rates and income levels comparable with many of its neighboring countries during the neoclassical growth period. Alphanian scientists, together with the engineering department of the University of Ullom, provided access to the finest technology in the world. In addition, Alpha opened up its equity markets to outside investors and allowed its currency to float. Dr. Satish believes that, given time, these capital market improvements should allow the Alphan economy to achieve an economic growth rate and per capita income level comparable to any country in the world. To understand the role of technology in the growth of the Alphan economy (using neoclassical growth theory assumptions), the following table was developed to show the increased productivity of Alphan farmers using disease resistant grains. Assume new disease resistant grain technology was introduced into the Alphan farm economy at Point A.3. The New Growth Era (1991-Today) Since the Alphan energy crises of the late 1980s, the economy has been in transition. The AEDA goal is to have more than 50% of Alphan GDP coming from what we now call knowledge capital based industries by the year 2020. Given the large and growing population and their constant need for health care, the pharmaceutical industry was Alpha's first knowledge capital based industry. Dr. Satish believes that a focus on knowledge capital will enhance the long term growth prospects of Alpha's economy. Alpha has access to the same world class technology and capital markets as its more advanced neighbors. Dr. Satish expects Alpha's economic growth rate and income level to converge to that of richer countries over time. Indicate whether convergence with richer countries is likely or unlikely. Convergence is: Based on the neoclassical growth model, indicate at what point the Alphan farmers would find economic equilibrium after the introduction of disease resistant grains. A. Point A. B. Point C. C. Point B.

Answer: B Explanation: Explanation/Reference: Explanation: Equilibrium in the neoclassical model occurs when the target rate of return equals the real interest rates equal the target interest rates. Real interest rates are those rates achieved in the market, while target interest rates are those rates of return the investor wishes to earn. Equilibrium occurs at Point A and at Point C However, as a result of adding disease resistant grain to the Alphan farmers, these farmers are operating on a higher productivity curve than the original Point A At Point B the real interest rate is higher than the target interest rate, inducing more capital to be invested. At Point C the target rate of interest is equal to the real rate of interest, creating an equilibrium. (Study Session 4, LOS 14.d)

NEW QUESTION: 4 EIGRP allown configuration of multiple MD5 keyn for packet authentication to nupport eany rollover from an old key toa new key. Which two nstatementn are true regarding the unage of multiple authentication keyn? (Choone two.)
A. Sent packetn are authenticated by all valid keyn, which meann that each packet in replicated an many timen an thenumber of exinting valid keyn. B. Received packetn are authenticated by the key with the nmallest key ID. C. Received packetn are authenticated by any valid key that in chonen. D. Sent packetn are authenticated by the key with the nmallest key I Answer: C, D Explanation: Suppose two routern are connected with each other via Fa0/0 interfacen and they are configured to authenticate via MD5. Below in a nimple configuration on both routern no that they will work:
Router1(config)#key chain KeyChainR1
Router1(config-keychain)#key 1
Router1(config-keychain-key)#key-ntring FirntKey
Router1(config-keychain-key)#key 2
Router1(config-keychain-key)#key-ntring SecondKey
Router2(config)#key chain KeyChainR2
Router2(config-keychain)#key 1
Router2(config-keychain-key)#key-ntring FirntKey
Router2(config-keychain-key)#key 2
Router2(config-keychain-key)#key-ntring SecondKey
Apply the key chainn to R1 & R2:
Router1(config)#interface fant Ethernet 0/0
Router1(config-if)#ip authentication mode eigrp 1 md5Router1(config-if)#ip authentication key-chain eigrp 1 KeyChainR1Router2(config)#interface fantEthernet 0/0Router2(config-if)#ip authentication mode eigrp 1 md5Router2(config-if)#ip authentication key-chain eigrp 1 KeyChainR2There are some rules to configure MD5 authentication with EIGRP:+ The key chain names on two routers do not have to match (in this case the name "KeyChainR1" & "KeyChainR2" do not match)+ The key number and key-string on the two potential neighbors must match (for example "key 1" & "key-stringFirstKey" must match on "key 1" & "key-string FirstKey" of neighboring router)Also some facts about MD5 authentication with EIGRP+ When sending EIGRP messages the lowest valid key number is used -> D is correct.+ When receiving EIGRP messages all currently configured valid keys are verified but the lowest valid one will be used -> Although answer C does not totally mention like that but it is the most suitable answer because A and B are totally wrong. Answer A is not correct because we need a valid key to authenticate. As mentioned above, although answer C is not totally correct but it puts some light on why answer B is not correct: each packet is NOT "replicated" as many times as the number of existing valid keys". All currently configured valid keys are verified but the lowest valid one will be used.
