NEW QUESTION: 4 A. Option D B. Option B C. Option C D. Option A Answer: A Explanation: The user can create subnets within a VPC. If the user wants to connect to VPC from his own data center, he can setup public and VPN only subnets which uses hardware VPN access to connect with his data center. When the user has configured this setup, it will update the main route table used with the VPN-only subnet, create a custom route table and associate it with the public subnet. It also creates an internet gateway for the public subnet. By default, the internet traffic of the VPN subnet is routed to a virtual private gateway while the internet traffic of the public subnet is routed through the internet gateway. The user can set up the route and security group rules. These rules enable the traffic to come from the organization's network over the virtual private gateway to the public subnet to allow proxy settings on that public subnet.
