What backup method could be used to quickly put the secondary firewall into production?A. snapshotB. backupC. upgrade_exportD. manual backupAnswer: A

NEW QUESTION: 2While reviewing the business continuity plan of an organization, an IS auditor observed that the organization's data and software files are backed up on a periodic basis. Which characteristic of an effective plan does this demonstrate?A. MitigationB. ResponseC. DeterrenceD. RecoveryAnswer: A*Explanation:Explanation/Reference:Explanation:An effective business continuity plan includes steps to mitigate the effects of a disaster. Files must be restored on a timely basis for a backup plan to be effective. An example of deterrence is when a plan includes installation of firewalls for information systems. An example of recovery is when a plan includes an organization's hot site to restore normal business operations.

NEW QUESTION: 3Which design principles for cloud architecture are recommended when re-architecting a large monolithic application? (Select TWO.)A. Design for scalability.B. Implement loose coupling.C. Use manual monitoring.D. Rely on individual components.E. Use fixed servers.Answer: A, D*Explanation:ExplanationRearchitecting applications involves sweeping change where an old monolithic application is completely revamped according to modern microservices architecture. Using individual components to re-architect a big application is one part of the process. The most important part is to design the application for scalability because the level of investment for a monolithic application can only be justified when resilience and scalability is needed.
