NEW QUESTION: 3Which feature is used to translate several internal addresses to only one or a few external addresses (also referred to as "overload")?
A. Overload Address MethodB. Address Translation TableC. Network Address TranslationD. Port Address Translation
Answer: D
Explanation:The PAT feature, a subset of NAT functionality, can be used to translate several internal addresses into only one or a few external addresses. PAT uses unique source port numbers on the private global IP address to distinguish between translations. Because the port number is encoded in 16 bits, the total number could theoretically be as high as 65,536 per IP address. PAT will attempt to preserve the original source port number. If this number is already allocated then PAT will attempt to find the first available port number starting from the beginning of the appropriate port group 0-511, 512-1023, or 1024-655351. If there is still no port number available from the appropriate group and more than one IP address is configured, PAT will move to the next IP address in the pool and try to allocate the original source port number again. This continues until it runs out of available ports and IP addresses.
