NEW QUESTION: 1Your network contains an Active Directory domain named contoso.com. The domain contains a server named Server1 that runs Windows Server 2012. Server1 has the IP Address Management (IPAM) Server feature installed. IPAM is configured currently for Group Policy-based provisioning. You need to change the IPAM provisioning method on Server1. What should you do?
A. Run the ipamgc.exe command.
B. Run the Set-IPAMConfiguration cmdlet.
C. Reinstall the IP Address Management (IPAM) Server feature.
D. Delete IPAM Group Policy objects (GPOs) from the domain.
Answer: C
Explanation: You cannot change the provisioning method after completing the initial setup. When you install IPAM and configure either manual OR GPO, you receive the same message about not being able to change the provisioning method. As a matter of fact, I set it up in my lab and configured it as GPO. Here is a copy/paste of the message that is presently on the IPAM home page in server manager: "The access configuration mode cannot be modified after completing the IPAM provisioning wizard" Also, the help console in IPAM displays this when searching about provisioning methods: "The managed server provisioning method cannot be changed after you complete the IPAM provisioning wizard."

NEW QUESTION: 2VLAN Trunking Protocol is a Cisco protocol that propagates the definition of VLANs over the local area network. Which two statements are true? (Choose two.)
A. VTP transparent mode forwards VTP packets and can act as a client or a server.
B. When Cisco switches are started from scratch, they are in server mode and their domain is set to null.
C. VTP requires trunk mode interfaces to propagate.
D. VTP requires access mode interfaces to propagate.
E. VTP config revision increases based on switch uptime.
Answer: B,C
Explanation/Reference: Explanation: When a new switch is added to the network, by default it is configured with no VTP domain name or password, but in VTP server mode. If no VTP Domain Name has been configured, it assumes the one from the first VTP packet it receives. Since a new switch has a VTP configuration revision of 0, it will accept any revision number as newer and overwrite its VLAN information if the VTP passwords match.
