NEW QUESTION: 1 Which of the following processor states does not save power? A. C2 B. C0 C. C1 D. C3
Answer: B
Explanation: The C0 processor state does not save power. It is an operational state. Answer option B is incorrect. The C1 state is a powered down state, but the processor takes action immediately on request. The C1 state uses less power than C0 state. Answer option A is incorrect. The C2 state is also known as Stop-Clock. It uses less power than C1 state. In this state, the processor takes a little longer time than C1 state to come in action on the request of applications. Answer option C is incorrect. The C3 state is also known as the sleep mode. In this state, the processor cache is flushed. In this state, the processor takes a few seconds to be available for action.
