NEW QUESTION: 1A host-based IDS is resident on which of the following?A. bastion hostsB. On each of the critical hostsC. decentralized hostsD. central hostsAnswer: B*Explanation:A host-based IDS is resident on a host and reviews the system and event logs in order to detect an attack on the host and to determine if the attack was successful. All critical servers should have a Host Based Intrusion Detection System (HIDS) installed. As you are well aware, network based IDS cannot make sense or detect pattern of attacks within encrypted traffic. A HIDS might be able to detect such attack after the traffic has been decrypted on the host. This is why critical servers should have both NIDS and HIDS.FROM WIKIPEDIA:A HIDS will monitor all or part of the dynamic behavior and of the state of a computer system. Much as a NIDS will dynamically inspect network packets, a HIDS might detect which program accesses what resources and assure that (say) a word-processor hasn't suddenly and inexplicably started modifying the system password-database. Similarly a HIDS might look at the state of a system, its stored information, whether in RAM, in the file-system, or elsewhere; and check that the contents of these appear as expected.One can think of a HIDS as an agent that monitors whether anything/anyone - internal or external has circumvented the security policy that the operating system tries to enforce.
