Whether a past event results in a present obligation is usually clear. Thus, it is clear from the circumstances that the entity's sale of goods without warranty is an obligating event that resulted in a present obligation for the issuance of warranty costs. Recognition of provisions is appropriate when the entity has a legal or constructive present obligation resulting from a past event (called an obligating event), it is probable that an outflow of economic benefits will be necessary to settle the obligation, and its amount can be reliably estimated.
